

Four Faces of Power

Sean is standing next to the vending machine in the Commons and wants to buy a Coke. Libby has control over the vending machine.

There are four distinct ways power can operate in this situation. What are they? You might come up with different examples in which the same principle of control is operating. We're looking for four different principles of power. Hint: Not all the power depends on Libby.

- 1.
- 2.
- 3.
- 4.

If you get all four, you'll get some chocolate.

As we debrief this exercise, record any notes or thoughts about power that you have below. You will transfer these thoughts to your DP. This might help you in your term paper and digital story.
